ESMT Berlin: campus open for in-class teaching

- Germany reopens borders for international students with valid visa
- Master's in Management (MIM) Essentials Program supports online start for delayed students

ESMT Berlin resumes in-class teaching as Germany reopens its borders for students from all over the world. ESMT President Jörg Rocholl comments, "We are very delighted that we can resume classroom teaching on campus. Not only can students from around the globe receive a visa, but they can also take part in the live classroom experience." Health safety on campus remains the top priority for ESMT as the international business school opens its doors again with classrooms modified to ensure social distancing.

For students unable to make it for the start of the MIM program on September 15, 2020, ESMT Berlin has launched the online Master's in Management \(MIM\) Essentials Program together with the top international business schools Imperial College Business School and IE Business School. The online program offers recent college graduates the opportunity to learn essential management skills and earn a certificate from all three schools. For international students who are delayed coming to Berlin, the Essentials Programs allows them to start online, receive academic credits, and join the class on campus for face-to-face teaching at a later date.
