ESMT Berlin welcomes new part-time MBA class

This week, 47 students with 24 different nationalities begin their part-time MBA program at ESMT Berlin.

This is the second intake of the ESMT Part-time MBA. The participants are, on average, 33 years old and have seven years of professional work experience. The new class is composed of 28 percent women and 72 percent men.

The ESMT Part-time MBA is aimed at professionals who want to earn an MBA degree without giving up their jobs. The so-called “blended” learning format with 80 percent online and 20 percent face-to-face sessions offers participants a flexible learning plan. The program lasts 24 months and is aimed at participants with at least three years of work experience. Students have access to an innovative online learning platform used collaboratively across the FOME alliance, comprising nine internationally renowned business schools, including Imperial College Business School, the University of Melbourne, Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, and IE Business School.
