The ESMT Campus

The ESMT Campus was opened in 2006 in the former GDR Council of State building. The building is located on the historic Schlossplatz, directly opposite the former Berlin City Palace.

Opened on October 3, 1964, the State Building was the official residence of Erich Honecker, among others. The façade is significantly influenced by the reproduction of the Portal IV of the former Berlin City Palace, in front of whose balcony Karl Liebnecht is said to have proclaimed the “free socialist republic” in 1918. From 1999 to 2001, the building also served as the official residence of the then German Chancellor Gerhard Schröder. ESMT has had its headquarters in the building since 2006. The Council of State building was renovated by the ESMT Foundation in accordance with the preservation order and its conversion into a modern educational institution was completed in late 2005. The former banqueting, ceremonial, and diplomatic halls now houses lecture halls and event rooms. With the interior design largely remaining true to the original. Between 2015 and 2017, ESMT has renovated and expanded other parts of the building.
